

Engineering News Record

August 18, 1997; page 75

Employees Find Leadership Skills in Classrooms and in the Woods

Seeking to further empower employees, DPR is heading into the woods. Over the next two years up to 200 DPR employees will be attending a five-day leadership workshop in the Colorado Mountains. DPR has grown quickly over the last seven years and according to co-founder Doug Woods, "we needed more people carrying the flag." Leadership training varies from experiential learning to case studies to assessments into participants' character, core aptitudes, and values.